REFLECTION

Palm Sunday and Holy Week present us with bewildering contradictions in how the people treated Jesus. At first, the people treated him like a king, with tremendous joy and excitement among them when he entered Jerusalem. They greeted him as the Messiah. Less than one week later, however, the crowd, according to Matthew’s Gospel, insisted that Jesus be crucified. Their attitude towards him had changed fundamentally. We might ask: Why? The reason was that he had challenged them to change their lifestyles in imitation of his example. Many of us today would claim to be very different from those people who demanded Jesus’ death because we think that we would have behaved differently towards him. However, we forget that it was our sins and the sins of all people that Jesus took on himself when he was crucified.

-The Curate's Corner-

The high point of the celebration of the Lord's Passion is when the priest and people are called to adore the Holy Cross. It's a moment so sacred that the priest must remove his chasuble and even his shoes as he kisses the crucifix. But why is this moment so sacred?

-Adoration of the Holy Cross-

In the final moments of his passion our Lord enters completely into the space of the sinner. As St Paul he says, "Christ became sin." Abandoned by friends, pressed down by the sins of the world, so agonised that he sweated blood, he now feels every bit of suffering we have ever felt and more. Pinned to the cross he accepts all suffering and humiliation.

Earlier our Lord had said, "unless you take up your cross and follow me you cannot be my disciple," and now we see in agonising detail what this means. The cross means a death in utter agony, nakedness, and humiliation. But maybe that bothers us, maybe it's like St Paul said, "the cross is a stumbling block for the Jews, and foolishness for the Greeks." That the cross is just too much to stomach, and we don't want to suffer. And yet St Paul continues, "we proclaim Christ crucified," and it's because this man pinned to the cross is the full story. Just think, what brought Jesus to the cross: it was fear, betrayal, an unwillingness to see the works of God, and unwillingness to let go of sin. It was our sin. All of our disfunction is revealed on the cross. But now Christ endures all of it to conquer all of it. Because of the cross, no sin of ours can finally separate us from the love of God, if only we repent and are willing to join him on the cross.

So, as we look upon the cross let's see how much he loves us. Let's see in our suffering an invitation to participate in his suffering which redeemed the world. And here's an old prayer to help us along.

There He hangs — pale figure pinned against the wood.
God grant that I could love Him as I really know I should.
I draw a little closer to share that love Divine
And almost hear Him whisper, "Ah foolish child of Mine!
If I should now embrace you,
My hands would stain you red.
And if I leaned to whisper,
The thorns would pierce your head."
And then I knew in silence that love demands a price
'Twas then I learned that suffering is but the kiss of Christ.
