O Jerusalem, glorify the Lord, who gives you your fill of finest wheat.

REFLECTION: In today’s Gospel narrative is an invitation to abandon ourselves trustingly to God in every moment of our life, especially in the moment of trial and turmoil. When we have strong feelings of doubt and fear and we seem to be sinking, in life’s difficult moments where everything becomes dark, we must not be ashamed to cry out like Peter: “Lord, save me”. To knock on God’s heart, on Jesus’s heart. “Lord, save me.” It is a beautiful prayer! And Jesus’s gesture, who immediately reaches out His hand and grasps that of His friend, should be contemplated at length: this is Jesus. Jesus does this. Jesus is the Father’s hand who never abandons us, the strong and faithful hand of the Father, who always and only wants what is good for us. God is not in the loud sound, God is not the hurricane, He is not in the fire, He is not in the earthquake – as the narrative about the Prophet Elijah also recalls today that says God is the light breeze – that never imposes itself, but asks to be heard. Having faith means keeping your heart turned to God, to His love, to His Fatherly tenderness, amid the storm.

~ The Curate's Corner ~ A theology of the Home

A good priest friend of mine once recommended that I have a few “trackies” families I can call on. What he meant was that I should cultivate a few close friendships with young families who were not my parishioners, people my own age I wasn't called to minister to but could instead spend time at their house being so at ease that it wouldn't be out of place to wear my trackies. His point was that priests need friendships just like everyone else does, that we can't always be the ones giving, that sometimes we need to receive hospitality too. And thankfully God has provided me with such wonderful friendships.

But why is hospitality so important? Well, looking more closely, we can see that it's rooted in kindness- not a kindness that is merely polite or just wanting to keep up appearances- but a kindness that seeks to fulfill the need of another without having to be asked. And often a bit of kindness is enough to heal, soften, and change the course of a conversation or even one's whole life. As one priest writes, “kindness has converted more sinners than zeal, eloquence or learning.” Certainly zeal, eloquence and learning can convert hearts and minds, but they rarely do so without kindness because this lets the other person know we actually care about them.

But hospitality can't just be limited to our friends. In the book of Genesis, Abraham and Sarah welcome three strangers in their home who turn out to be three angels and signifiers of the Holy Trinity. They thought they were entertaining mere men, but it turned out they were giving hospitality to God himself. And it's a reminder that the stranger bears the image of God, even if that image is veiled under the often-rough appearance of humanity. God often puts the stranger before us to teach us how to love, because if we cannot love the man or woman in front of us who is made in God's image, how can we love the Lord who is God himself and whom we cannot see.

Practical tips

Cultivate friendships! As Catholics we're tempted to associate only with people of our own kind. But we can open our lives and homes to people of other walks of life and world views. We will find ourselves on opposing sides of many important issues, and we shouldn't cave on the deeper topics, but if we affirm and learn from the good we see, avoiding embarrassing the other or becoming defensive, we might just learn a little more about what it means to love like Christ. And what's more it might be their only experience of Catholic family life.
